BRIAN’S NOTEBOOK

THE WEEK THAT WAS

Brian’s Take recaps 19 MSB opinion takes published during the week. These are the key conclusions from MSB’s reporting, analysis and game coverage....

1

Baltimore Orioles Tender 2027 Contracts to Colton Cowser, Gunnar Henderson and Jordan Westburg...

Orioles Make the Right Decision The Orioles made the expected and necessary decisions by retaining Cowser, Henderson and Westburg. These three players remain important to the organization’s future, and allowing any of them to leave through the non-tender process would have created an unnecessary roster hole. Henderson is particularly important because of hi...

Baltimore Orioles Claim Braden Nett Off Waivers, Welcome Back Carter Baumler in Pair of Pitching Moves...

Two Low-Risk Moves With Potential Upside The Orioles are making the right decision by continuing to collect young pitching talent, especially players who have already demonstrated success in the minor leagues. While neither Nett nor Baumler arrives as an established major league pitcher, both offer qualities that could make them valuable contributors in the...

3

Baltimore Orioles Add Seven Prospects to 40-Man Roster, Acquire Josiah Romeo in Trade With Athletics...

Orioles Make Smart Long-Term Investments Baltimore’s decision to protect seven prospects reflects an organization that continues to place significant value on developing talent internally. While the Orioles will need established major league contributors to compete in 2027, maintaining a strong farm system remains essential to sustaining success. Bradfield...

4

Baltimore Orioles Release Outfielder Rece Hinds as Offseason Roster Changes Continue...

Orioles Need More Consistency From Their Outfield Baltimore’s decision to release Rece Hinds is understandable from a roster-building perspective, although the timing raises questions. The Orioles signed him to a major league contract for 2027 on Oct. 30, only to release him 18 days later. That quick turnaround suggests the organization’s evaluation of its roster nee...
